In today's digital and customer-centric world, banks and insurers need to run bancassurance on a joint strategy. With the pandemic and resulting lockdowns accelerating the digital needs of customers, insurers must look towards providing seamless online integration and remote service offerings to build high-performing bancassurance in the next normal. How can it be achieved? What are the key strategies for successful alliances? Bancassurance and insurers need to build a more effective partnership with InsurTech startups in order to compete in a fast-moving tech environment. With the demand for new products growing post-lockdown, insurers can leverage the bancassurance channel in an efficient and cost-effective way.

Asia Insurance Review's Asia Bancassurance virtual conference will set the stage for banks, insurers, strategic partners and international top leaders to explore innovative strategies to harness the power of partnerships, dynamic distribution channels, smart deals, advanced analytics that drive lead generation, as well as the reengineered insurer-bank collaboration model to keep bancassurance thriving.
