Introduction

Asia's insurance broking industry is entering a defining era. Risk is no longer episodic or predictable – it is systemic, interconnected, and accelerating. Climate volatility, geopolitical realignment, cyber escalation, supply chain fragility, regulatory scrutiny, and capital market uncertainty are reshaping the corporate risk landscape across the region. Clients are no longer seeking transactional placement alone; they expect strategic guidance, data-driven insight, and sophisticated risk structuring capabilities.

At the same time, brokers themselves face structural pressure. Margin compression, commission transparency, digital platforms, embedded insurance ecosystems, consolidation, and private equity influence are redefining competitive dynamics. The traditional intermediation model is under strain. The question is no longer whether the broker role will evolve; it is how quickly leadership can reposition their firms for sustainable relevance and profitability.

The 14th Asia Insurance Brokers' Summit is designed as a regional leadership forum, and an august gathering of CEOs, managing directors, regional heads, specialty leaders, and strategic partners from leading insurers and broker firms across Asia.

Hosted in Jakarta, one of Southeast Asia's most dynamic growth markets, the Summit will focus squarely on the strategic agenda: redefining the broker value proposition, strengthening insurer partnerships, deepening specialty capabilities, leveraging analytics, navigating regulatory complexity, and building resilient operating models.

This is not a discussion about incremental improvement. It is about leadership decisions that will shape the structure and stature of Asian broking for the next decade. The mandate is clear: elevate from intermediary to indispensable strategic risk partner.

Strengthening Broker–Insurer Partnerships for Long-Term Leverage

As market dynamics evolve and competitive pressures intensify, brokers and insurers must move beyond traditional transactional relationships to build strategic partnerships that deliver long-term value, innovation, and client-centric solutions. This panel will explore how both parties can collaborate more effectively to navigate market volatility, enhance distribution effectiveness, and drive sustainable growth.

- Strengthening collaboration and negotiating leverage during hard and soft market cycles while maintaining profitable and sustainable relationships
- Building strategic broker–insurer partnerships that foster innovation, specialist expertise, and superior client outcomes beyond simple capacity placement
- Navigating potential conflicts in increasingly integrated distribution ecosystems while preserving trust, transparency, and independence

Partnership in a Changing Risk Landscape: Aligning Capital, Capability, and Client Outcomes

Climate exposure, cyber volatility, regulatory scrutiny, and alternative risk structures demand closer alignment between brokers and insurers. The question is how to build resilient, trust-based partnerships in a more demanding environment.

- How can brokers, insurers and risk managers co-develop solutions that address emerging and systemic risks?
- What does a modern, transparent, and strategically aligned partnership model look like?
- How can all stakeholders collaborate to deliver stronger client outcomes while preserving commercial discipline?

Moderator:

Erickson Mangunsong

Head of Partnership, Buana Jasa Pratama Insurance Brokers

Panellists:

Ibrahim Rachman

Member of the Competency Division, Indonesia Risk Management Professional Association (IRMAPA)

Dandy Yudhistira

3.15 pm

Panel Discussion

The Risk Triangle: Who Truly Delivers Value When It Matters? Corporate Risk Managers • Brokers • Insurers

In an era of climate volatility, cyber escalation, geopolitical fragmentation, and supply chain instability, risk transfer is only one part of the equation. Corporations are demanding predictability, clarity, and partnership, and not just policy placement. At the same time, insurers are recalibrating capital discipline, and brokers are redefining advisory roles.

When losses materialise, capacity tightens, or exclusions expand, where does real value emerge and where does it break down?

- Are corporates getting genuine strategic risk partnership — or simply more sophisticated transactions? Where do brokers and insurers meaningfully move the needle beyond pricing and placement?
- When markets harden or claims escalate, does alignment strengthen — or fracture? What structural changes are needed to improve transparency, accountability, and trust?
- How should the risk triangle evolve by 2030? Co-creation of solutions? Greater data sharing? Alternative risk structures? Shared long-term incentives?

Moderator:

Mirza Azis

Senior Vice President & Business Leader, Marsh Indonesia
